JEPPESEN MARINE'S KEN CIRILLO APPOINTED TO BOARD OF DIRECTORS, SEA TOW FOUNDATION FOR BOATING SAFETY AND EDUCATION

SOUTHOLD, N.Y. and CAPE COD, MASS., February 20, 2009 —The Sea Tow Foundation for Boating Safety and Education and Jeppesen Marine, recently announced the appointment of Ken Cirillo, business development executive for the market-leading provider of digital navigation solutions, to the Foundation's board of directors.

Cirillo is well known and respected across the marine industry, both as the long-time vice president/general manager of C-Map/USA in Cape Cod, Mass., as well as his current position following the global acquisition of C-Map by Jeppesen, a Boeing Company.

"I'm honored to be associated with this Foundation and I look forward to supporting its important initiatives to improve boating safety through education," said Cirillo. "Jeppesen Marine is dedicated to enhancing safety and enjoyment for recreational boaters. Our electronic charting technology is designed to increase boaters' confidence and situational awareness of their surroundings while on the water. The safest boaters, however, are the ones who support today's advanced navigation technology with a solid understanding of basic boating knowledge and skills. Making this information accessible and readily available to the public will improve safety and help prevent accidents. This is why I'm so excited about my new role with the Sea Tow Foundation for Boating Safety and Education," added Cirillo.

"Having a person on the board with Ken's broad experience with electronic charting as well as his extensive industry knowledge will be an asset in helping the Foundation meet its goals," said Michelle Zaloom, the Foundation's executive director. The Foundation focuses on implementing programs that will reduce recreational boating accidents, fatalities and property damage.

Jeppesen Marine encourages boaters everywhere to take advantage of this useful online tool, and to check back regularly for new courses and content.
